CONGRESSMEN URGE MASSIVE PARDON

CAPT. LANCASTER HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

LEARN TWO SUICIDE NOTES WERE FORGED BY FAMOUS AVIATOR

Flyer Companion Of Mrs. Keith - Miller Denies Charge

MIAMI, Fla., May 3.—Investigation of the mysterious death of Haden Clarke, young writer who was found shot to death in the home of his fiancée, Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller, was reopened today with the arrest of Captain W. N. Lancaster, Mrs. Keith-Miller's manager, on a charge of murder.

"Suicide notes," found with the body in the home shared by Mrs. Keith-Miller, Clarke and Lancaster, were forgeries and Lancaster has admitted writing them so that he and the woman flyer would not be implicated in the writer's death. He denied from jail that he had killed Clarke.

The two notes which led finally to Lancaster's arrest on the murder charge read:

"The economic situation is such I can't go through with it. Comfort mother in her sorrow. You have Bill, he is the whitest man I know. Haden." (This was addressed to Mrs. Keith-Miller).

"Bill, I can't make the grade. Tell Chubbie of our talk. My advice is never to leave her again. H."

State's Attorney Vernon Hawthorne filed the murder charge against Lancaster after having the notes examined by J. V. Herring, a recognized handwriting expert, who termed them "forgeries."

"I have taken ever precaution to make certain of my charges before filing them against Lancaster," he said today.

Lancaster meanwhile continued to deny the death of Clarke was anything but suicide. He said he discovered the body, wrote the notes to prevent suspicion from being cast towards Mrs. Keith-Miller or himself, and even attempted to revive Clarke sufficiently so he could sign the notes. He failed in this, he explained.

"I am absolutely innocent and the outcome of the case will prove it," Lancaster said today in discussing the case in which he previously had been held for more than fifty hours along with Mrs. Keith-Miller.

The latest development is a great shock to me. I realize there is a certain amount of circumstantial evidence tending to disprove the fact that Clarke committed suicide, but I am innocent.

"I have been treated with the utmost fairness throughout the case. I voluntarily gave the information concerning the notes. I wrote them so that Clarke might sign them and thus save us from being implicated in his death but he died before he could help me."

Mrs. Keith-Miller was questioned with Captain Lancaster but later released.

Behind the arrest is one of the strangest mysteries local authorities have had to deal with in years. Mrs. Keith-Miller and Lancaster, an internationally famous flying team, have been here several years. Their fame spread five years ago when they made a flight from London to Australia. Since then Lancaster has served as manager and close associate of the British woman.

Since coming to Florida, however, they had encountered reverses. None of their flying projects succeeded. There was even insufficient money to pay gas and electric bills. Mrs. Keith-Miller said. Then about that time she met Clarke through his mother, an instructor at Rollins College.

While Lancaster was in Mexico examining a flying projection which he subsequently claimed was a plan to smuggle Chinese into Mexico—Clarke and Mrs. Keith-Miller fell in love.

They notified Lancaster, who was in St. Louis, of their plan to marry and he telegraphed them urging they postpone the nuptials until he could arrive and be best man. He hurried to Miami, arriving at the house the trio shared on April 18.

The following day Clarke was found dead. He had been shot. A pistol was under the body. The two notes were found in the room. Mrs. Keith-Miller and Lancaster subsequently were questioned by police for several days.

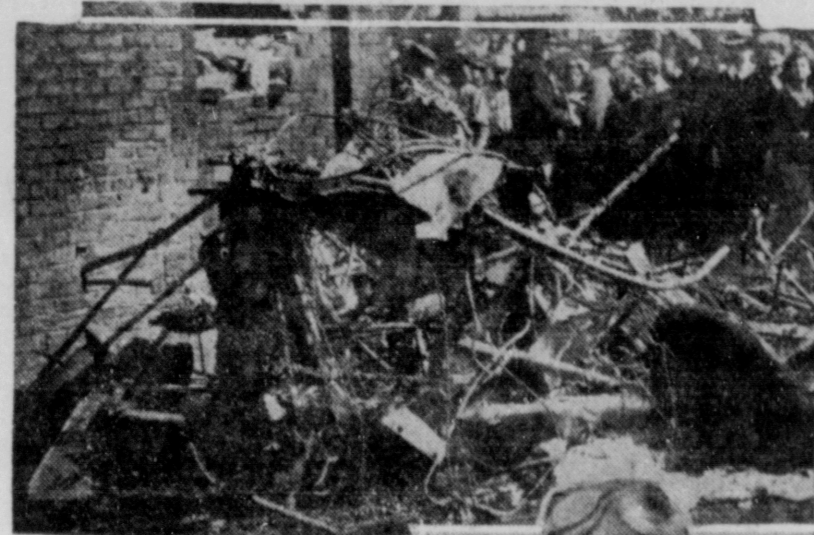

Throughout the questioning Mrs. Keith-Miller told of her love for Clarke, of their marriage plans, of the economic hardships that had

THUGS GET $1,500

CINCINNATI, O., May 3.—Two men obtained approximately $1,500 last night from the Eighth Street office of the Cincinnati Street Railway Co. The robbers bound Joseph Penno, night clerk at the office, and threw him to the floor. They ransacked a safe, and drawers containing change for conductors.

FLYERS DIED TO SAVE CROWDS

Two veteran aviators of the World War died in flames of their wrecked plane Saturday to save the lives of spectators below. The flyers, Lieut. Charles Fargo (left) and Lieut. Henry Sandusky, were flying over Chicago's South Side when engine trouble developed. Although both men wore parachutes

Musical Satire Wins Pulitzer Play Award

Novel "The Good Earth," Considered Best; Reveal Prizes

NEW YORK, May 3.—"Of Thee I Sing," a satirical musical comedy which lampoons American politics and political methods unmercifully, has been awarded the annual Pulitzer prize for drama, it was announced today.

The prize for the best novel written by an American during the year goes to Pearl S. Buck, Chiffa born daughter of a missionary, for her book, "The Good Earth," a story of present-day life in China. Mrs. Buck lives in Nanking.

The award for public service was won by the Indianapolis News, for its successful campaign to eliminate waste in city management and to reduce the tax levy. The prize for newspaper correspondence is awarded to Walter Duranty, Moscow correspondent for the New York Times, for his articles on the progress of the five-year plan, and to Charles G. Ross of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for an article entitled, "The Country's Plight—What Can Be Done About It?"

The cartoon award goes to John T. McCutcheon, of the Chicago Tribune.

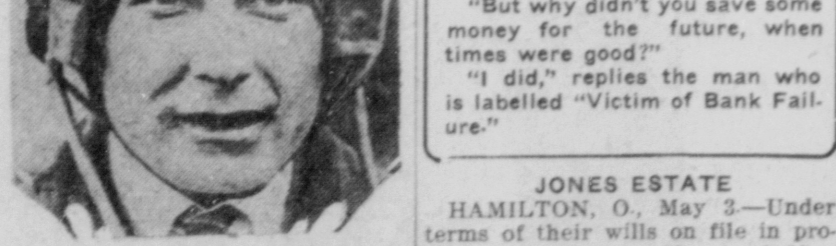

Ernest Bacon, San Francisco music student, and Francesco Roggeri, New York art student, likewise receive $1,800 scholarships to continue their studies in Europe.

"Of Thee I Sing," the libretto for which was written by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, is the first musical comedy ever to receive a Pulitzer award.

It is concerned with a presidential campaign in which the prime issue is love. Running on a "platform of love," the bachelor candidate for president promises he will marry the winner of a beauty contest.

CAPONE LOSES BRAVADO WHEN PRISON LOOMS

Whines When Court Rejects Appeal; Starts Term

CHICAGO, May 3.—Al Capone, the Coney Island barkeep who built an underworld empire in defiance of law and order, will leave in a few hours for Leavenworth Penitentiary, his empire shattered, his defiance shrunk to the whining of a common criminal.

The fat gangster whose scarred face became symbolic of the murderous terror of the gangs is expected to depart tonight in company of a carload of convicted dope peddlers, auto thieves and counterfeiters to start a ten-year sentence for defrauding the government of the tax on his ill-gotten income.

Two words pronounced by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the U. S. supreme court struck in a fraction of a second the false glamor of the pouty gangster. They were:

"Certiorari denied."

The words brought a climax to the firm, victorious march of the federal government against leaders in the ruthless outlawry that came to be known as the "Capone syndicate." It meant refusal of the court to review the Capone case and ended the last legal delay in carrying out the conviction and sentence.

Today U. S. marshals expected the order authorizing them to take Capone, grown 265 pounds fat in his stay in Cook County jail since trial last October, to Leavenworth where his sentence will run about seven and a half years with time out for good behavior.

After this he must serve a year in jail and is subject to $50,000 fine. Capone today was not the hall-fellow well-met pictured at his trial who squandered the plunder of illicit vice, liquor and gambling holding court in a Florida Palace, buying $1,000 trinkets for his henchmen scattering banknotes helter-skelter in modern emulation of a rake's progress.

Behind jail bars he sukked, alone, cursing his luck while in the city the leaderless criminal organization fought over the scraps of its one-time power with only a sneer for the one who had been known as "The Big Shot."

"It's a dirty deal—a bum rap," Capone said, prison pallor on his sagging cheeks. The supreme court didn't treat me fair.

"I'm a good citizen. I did lots of good. All I did was sell people liquor. The prohibition law is all wrong anyhow."

He said nothing of the ruthless rule of the machine gun that once fastened on the city the opprobrium of civilized people and the nickname "Murder Capital of the World." Of the gangland ride, corruption of officials, beer wars, unsolved killings, aroused citizenry, Capone was silent as he checked off his "good deeds."

Traveling scholarships, worth $1,800, were awarded to Frank R. Kelley, Brooklyn; Selma Hautzik, New York; and Jonathan D. Springer, Port Chester, N. Y., all students at the Columbia School of Journalism.

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO STOP BETTING

RAVENNA, O., May 3.—The Portage County Citizens League today has launched a vigorous campaign against betting at the Ravenna running race meeting. An appeal to Governor George White to stop the race program was expected to be made.

Max Letzel, of Akron, was brought into court on an affidavit charging him with purchasing a betting ticket. His hearing was continued until May 21.

DRUGGIST HELD

TOLEDO, O., May 3.—Arthur Link, Sandusky druggist, pleaded not guilty when arraigned on a prohibition charge before U. S. Commissioner Frederick W. Gaines here Monday. He was held in county jail in default of $5,000 bond. Don Ulmer, a clerk employed by Link, was charged with selling a gallon of alcohol to prohibition agents.

JONES ESTATE
HAMILTON, O., May 3.—Under terms of their wills on file in probate court here, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Jones, parents of Howard Jones and T. A. D. Jones, nationally known football coaches, left estates totaling $190,177. Mr. and Mrs. Jones lived at Exello, O.

EL RENO, Okla., May 3.—A bank bandit, holding three Oklahoma youths captive, remained at large today.

The robber, who escaped from Union City after looting a bank of $1,000, abducted the boys and commandeered their automobile in his wild flight from posses. The youths were Leslie Combs and his two companions.

The bandit fled from Union City with vigilantes close behind. He was headed off by Oklahoma County officers who fired at his car but escaped along a country road and abandoned his automobile and the bank loot in underbrush near Yukon.

STUDENT REMAINS IN COMA AFTER TAKING OVERDOSE OF POISON

KILLED BY POLICE

Brilliant Pupil Is Melancholy Police Are Told

CLEVELAND, May 3.—Carl Starkey, 23, student at Western Reserve University, remained in a coma at Lakeside hospital today from effects of sleeping tablets which he allegedly swallowed in an attempt to end his life.

Starkey's room-mate, John Schenck, said the youth left two notes on the bureau, both addressed to his mother, Mrs. Mabel Starkey, an instructor at Otterbein College, Westerville, O.

One of the notes said: "Dear Mother: There is no special reason. I am just better off not living, that's all. No one at all is to blame in any way. Carl." Contents of the second note were not revealed.

Schenck said Starkey was asleep when he left to attend classes yesterday morning. He was still asleep when he returned at noon. Unable to arouse him, Schenck called a physician.

He then discovered three empty bottles which had contained sleeping tablets under the bed, Schenck related. He found the notes on the dresser. When the physician was unable to revive Starkey, the youth was taken to Lakeside Hospital.

Starkey was graduated last year from Otterbein College, receiving an A. B. degree. He entered the school of library science at Western reserve last fall.

Physicians at Lakeside Hospital said they believed he had swallowed as many as 150 of the sleeping tablets as each of the three empty bottles found under the bed originally contained fifty.

PREMIER MUST HAVE SURGERY

LONDON, May 3.—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald will undergo an operation on his right eye immediately, an official announcement today said.

The operation will be performed Thursday afternoon. The operation will prevent the prime minister from returning to Geneva for conferences with other statesmen.

The prime minister's left eye was operated on several weeks ago. His vision was affected, but reports that he might have been retired from active life were denied by his physicians.

Sir Thomas Harder, who performed the operation, accompanied the prime minister on his recent trip to Geneva. MacDonald appeared much improved in health when he returned here.

FARMER'S HOME IS OBJECT OF THREAT

TIPPIN, O., May 3.—The home of A. E. Marshall, Venice Township farmer, was being guarded today by Attica police as a result of a note threatening Marshall with destruction of his home and buildings unless he paid $1,000.

Telephone wires to the Marshall home were cut Monday. Marshall Ralph W. Chilcote, of Attica, revealed he had been fired upon from ambush while investigating near the farm.

The extortion note read: "Lindy couldn't catch us so you can't."

BUSINESS MAN DIES

NEW LEXINGTON, O., May 3.—R. W. Griffith, 66, prominent business man of Crooksville, near here for the last twenty years, died Monday from heart trouble.

BANK BANDIT KIDNAPS THREE YOUTHS AND FLEES WITH LOOT

EL RENO, Okla., May 3.—A bank bandit, holding three Oklahoma youths captive, remained at large today.

The robber, who escaped from Union City after looting a bank of $1,000, abducted the boys and commandeered their automobile in his wild flight from posses. The youths were Leslie Combs and his two companions.

The bandit fled from Union City with vigilantes close behind. He was headed off by Oklahoma County officers who fired at his car but escaped along a country road and abandoned his automobile and the bank loot in underbrush near Yukon.

The fugitive was known to be armed with a rifle. The bandit was seen standing alongside a highway where he stopped Ray Hagg, of Banner, and demanded the youth's car.

"He stuck his gun in my face and told me to get out," Hagg said. "He got in and tried to start it but the motor wouldn't run."

"Then he stopped the car in which Leslie Combs and two other boys were riding.

"He got in with them and they drove off toward Banner."

The bandit last was seen in the car near Banner. He was sitting in the front seat between two of the youths. The third boy was in the rear.

KIDNAPED YOUTH STILL SOUGHT

GUSTAV MILLER

CHICAGO, May 3.—Police activity in the hunt for kidnapers of Gustav Miller, 23, of Joliet, Ill., was reduced to mere routine today due to the wish of Miller's wealthy family for freedom in negotiation with the abductors.

A telephone call to Max Miller, malt dealer and father of the youth, promised return of the victim last night but so far as police could learn the promise was not carried out.

The hunt for the abductors centered here in the belief the youth is being held for $50,000 ransom by members of the west side "42" gang.

Police last night raided a drug store on a report five men had been seen there using the public telephone booth to call police. The men had been seen earlier in similar conversation at another drug store but disappeared by the time police arrived.

DESPAIRING PARTY LEADERS STRUGGLE TO SLASH SALARIES

Democrats Hope To Lower Exemption To Effect Saving

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Despairing party leaders cracked their whips today in an attempt to drive the house into line for a drastic reduction of government salaries and to pass a sizeable economy bill.

Democratic chiefs planned to demand a roll-call vote in an effort to lower the exemption from the 11 percent wage cut to the original $1,000 limit of the $2,500 exemption adopted last week. The salary reduction as it stands would save $12,000,000 against a saving of $67,000,000 at the lower exemption figure.

Republican leaders, following a conference with President Hoover, redoubled their efforts to substitute the President's "furlough" plan for the direct pay reduction. This would in effect put government workers on a five day week basis and would save $80,000,000.

If the pay cut stays in its present form, it seemed likely the economy bill would go to the senate with provisions for only $35,000,000 of definite savings out of an original total of more than $200,000,000 recommended by the economy committee.

The first item to be voted on as consideration of the economy bill was resumed today was the proposed reduction of $48,000,000 in veterans' benefits. Defeat of this section seemed clearly indicated by the passage yesterday of a bill granting new pensions to widows and orphans of ex-servicemen. The measure was adopted by 316 to 16 under suspension of the rules.

It is estimated the new pension measure, if approved by the senate, would add $10,000,000 to the taxpayers' burden next year, $100,000,000 within the next five years, and increasing amounts thereafter.

In some quarters the Democratic leadership was sharply criticized for bringing forward such a bill in the one-day interlude in the economy debate.

The pension bill was sponsored by Chairman Rankin of the veterans' committee, who is also an ardent advocate of the $2,000,000 cash bonus. He said it had the unified support of all major veterans' organizations.

Only one member of the house spoke against the measure—Rep. Johnson, Republican, South Dakota, himself a war veteran. Republican Leader Snell voted against it but Majority Leader Rainey joined with 315 other congressmen in support. No Ohioans or West Virginians voted against the bill.

"OUTSIDE" AFTER 33 YEARS
SEATTLE.—Joe Dexter, Alaska trading post operator, who made his first trip "outside" in thirty-three years arrived here en route to the East.

SENTIMENT PLACES HONOR TRIAL CASE BEFORE GOVERNOR

Defendants Are More Optimistic; Begin Assault Trial

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Leading members of the house, in a petition sponsored by Rep. Thatcher, Republican, Kentucky, implored Governor Judd of Hawaii to pardon Lt. Thomas H. Massie and his co-defendants convicted of manslaughter.

The petition was cabled to Judd last night. It said:

"We as members of congress, deeply concerned for the welfare of Hawaii, believe that the prompt and unconditional pardon of Lieutenant Massie and his associates will serve that welfare and the ends of justice. We, therefore, most earnestly urge that such pardon be granted."

The signers include the delegation from Kentucky, Massie's home state, and Democratic Leader Rainey, Chairman Hare of the insular affairs committee, Chairman Byrns of the appropriations committee, Chairman Cochran of the expenditures committee, Chairman McDuffie of the economy committee and Acting Chairman Crisp of the ways and means committee.

Thatcher said he expected to add many other names to the petition. The house judiciary committee today was to consider the Crisp bill which would grant a congressional pardon, the Delaney resolution urging President Hoover to grant a pardon, and the Bingham bill passed by the senate yesterday which would prevent the attackers of Mrs. Massie from being acquitted should a jury trying them disagree a second time.

There was considerable discussion regarding the legality of the Crisp measure.

HONOLULU, May 3.—Growing sentiment in favor of pardons for the American society woman and three navy men convicted of slaying a Hawaiian half-caste placed the case before Governor Judd today as he bent every effort to restore Honolulu to its once peaceful calm.

Fear of new racial outbreaks when the four were found guilty of manslaughter by a mixed jury of whites and browns appeared to have been dissipated. Even the defendants, awaiting sentence next Friday, were reported optimistic over the ultimate success of their fight for liberty.

Developments today in the famed honor slaying case and its ensuing political and social repercussions included:

1. The territorial legislature adopted a bill repealing the law which provides for release of defendants when two trials result in jury disagreement, and sent it to Governor Judd.

2. Joseph (Blackie) Young, 22-year-old islander was brought to trial as the first defendant for whom the territory will demand the death penalty on assault charges.

3. Governor Judd warned Harry A. Kleugel, territory employee, that his wife's lawsuit against enforcement conditions must stop.

4. Revelation came that Prosecutor John C. Kelley's now famous "to hell with admirals" plea exerted a strong influence on the honor slaying jury.

5. Clarence Darrow, veteran chief defense counsel, prepared new trial motions and appeal for presentation to Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis, Friday.

6. Pardon petitions were circulated on behalf of the defendants. The new legislative bill apparently was intended to prevent a recurrence of the mistrial which resulted from charges of Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, wife of an American navy officer, that five islanders brutally attacked her. Although four of the defendants will be retried soon, another hung jury would free them.

Selection of a jury to try Young on charges of attacking 17-year-old Bernice Lam, Chinese girl, was impeded by racial antipathies and the reluctance of veniremen to serve.

An entire panel was exhausted during the first day of trial and another ordered for today.

Young was accused of frightening away the girl's escort, a young Chinese, and then mistreating her.

Under the statute, the jury passes on Young's guilt or innocence and Judge Crisp decides, in event of conviction, on the death penalty or any lesser sentence.

Mrs. Kleugel instituted the pardon petitions which will be presented to Governor Judd. Her husband former city manager of Sacramento, Calif., is now executive

TELLING the WORLD'S NEWS with PICTURES

Down at the Last Fence

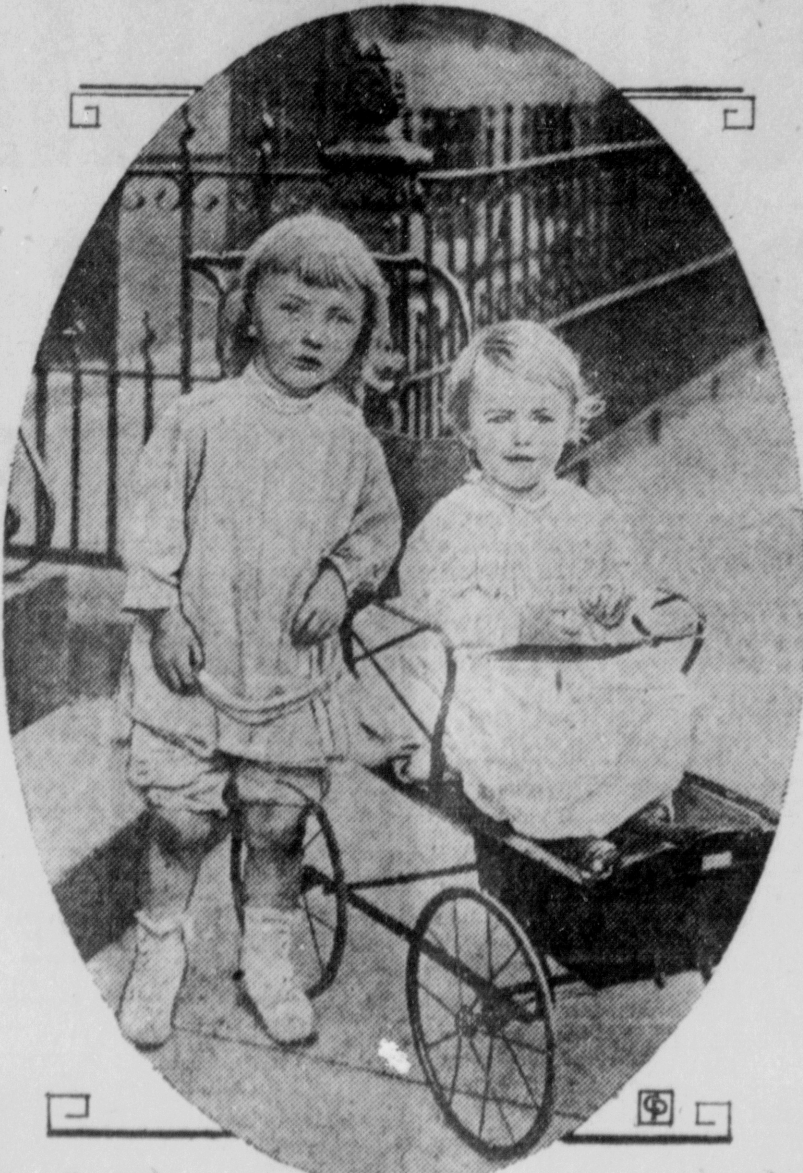

Pride cometh before a fall and this was no exception to the rule. J. William Middendorf, Jr., was proud that he was leading the field home in the Neophyte Handicap, held for society youngsters in the Worthington Valley, Baltimore, Md., recently. But alas! his mount, "Grey Boy," took a header at the last fence and lost the race. Plenty of thrills and spills marked the junior cross-country steeplechase.

Mine Prober

Undaunted by the cold reception which has been accorded to other would-be investigators, Helen Heick, pretty co-ed at the University of Pittsburgh, plans to lead a delegation of Pitt students into Kentucky to investigate mine conditions there. Incensed by the treatment meted out to other student visitors to the troubled regions, Miss Heick is determined to give full publicity to prevailing conditions in the coal fields.

Produced Felt-Coated Steel

Dr. A. W. Coffman, of the Mellon Institute laboratories in Pittsburgh, Pa., is shown as he demonstrated the new malleable metal that is covered with felt, which can be treated to make it resistant to fire or any corrosive element. Dr. Coffman has developed the coating, which opens a world of commercial possibilities. By the use of alloys the hitherto alien materials are made an integral part of the steel, on one or both sides.

Recovered by "Desk Sleuth"

Stolen from the New York home of the wealthy Harry Glenby last January, these jewels, valued at $49,000, have just been recovered by Abe Grallo, a diminutive "desk man" at the New York Bureau of Investigation. When all the star sleuths had failed to trace the gems, Grallo went into the underworld posing as an out-of-towner looking for "hot stuff" (stolen property.) His venture ended in the recovery of the jewels and the arrest of two women and three men.

Seeks Love Balm

Charging that he wrecked her romance with his son, Mrs. Virginia Strum McElvain, of Chicago, has filed suit for $100,000 against her father-in-law, James McElvain, coal and oil millionaire, of Texas and Chicago. Mrs. McElvain says she was happy with her husband until his father alienated his affections.

The twenty-first convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in Seattle, Wash., June 9-18, the president, Mrs. John F. Sippel, presiding. The high point of interest will be the election of officers. Nine candidates for the five offices are announced: Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, Brockton, Mass., is the lone candidate for the presidency; Mrs. Eugene B. Lawson, Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. Henry C. Taylor, Bloomfield, Ia., have their bonnets in the ring for the first vice presidency. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Ore., is the only candidate for recording secretary; Mrs. Edward Hammett, Sheboygan, Wis., treasurer, seeks re-election.

May Festival Chorus Opens Music Week

An audience that filled the First M. E. Church Monday evening was afforded an unusual treat when the May Festival Chorus, under the auspices of the Xenia Woman's Music Club presented a concert under the direction of Mr. O. E. Gebhardt, Dayton. This was one of many community festivals being given throughout the United States in celebration of National Music Week.

Mr. Gebhardt is a thorough musician extremely capable and artistic with a magnetic personality that made his association with the chorus group a most pleasant one.

Mrs. William Anderson at the piano and Miss Juanita Rankin at the organ furnished an effective accompaniment. The success of the affair was due to the large measure to these two musicians and Mrs. William H. McGervey, members of the committee.

Very appropriately the program opened with a patriotic group which included Rachmaninoff's

Members of the Cedrine Club will meet with Miss Flora Nisbet, 316 W. Market St., Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Paintersville M. P. Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Grace Jones, near Paintersville, Thursday afternoon.

Dr. G. W. Kuhn, 261 N. King St., attended a meeting of the Dayton Dental Society in Dayton Monday evening. Dr. Shively, Dayton surgeon, spoke on "Blood Chemistry and its Relation to the Care of the Teeth."

A men's prayer meeting will be held in the Laymen's Evangelistic Association's room, Green St., Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Burba, W. Second St., had as their guests over the week end, Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Finck and son, Donald, Brookville, O., and Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Lawrence and son, Winston, Dayton.

Members of Zanetta Council, No. 129, D. of P., will give a benefit card party at the home of Mrs. Everett Harner, 131 W. Second St., Wednesday afternoon. Euchre and "500" will be in play, the games starting at 2 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Haines, Cleveland, are spending several days in Wilmington where they were called by the death of Mr. Haines' mother, Mrs. H. B. Haines. Mrs. Frank Haines was formerly Miss Helen Dymond, this city, and her children, Frankie Louise and David, are remaining here with Mr. and Mrs. John Dymond, Washington St., during her visit in Wilmington.

The meeting of the Women's Relief Corps will be held at the home of Mrs. Tom Harner, Market and West Sts., Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock instead of Wednesday afternoon as previously announced.

"Glorious Forever," "Hail to Our Native Land" set to the popular "Grand March" from Verdi's opera, "Aida," and "America Triumphant," by Demarest featuring Mrs. Richard McClelland and Mr. J. E. Balmer in excellent renditions of the incidental solos.

The second group opened with Schubert's "Omnipotence," the incidental solo presenting to great advantage Mrs. John Watkins' lovely voice. A difficult but thrilling number, "Land-Sighting," by Grieg-Spicer, with Mr. Roy Siefert singing the baritone solo, was followed by "God of Our Fathers" from "Stabat Mater" by Rossini. Mrs. Fox Coffelt, who possesses a voice of charm and wide range, was soloist in this number.

A string ensemble appeared in "Andante Cantabile," from the first symphony of Beethoven, giving a precise and artistic interpretation. They responded to an encore with the spirited "Spanish Dance No. 1," by Moszkowski. Members of the ensemble were violins—Mr. Marcus Shoup, Miss Christine Williams, Mrs. Louis Hamerle, Miss Lucy Stout; cello—Miss Lois Street and piano—Miss Marjorie Street.

A group of two numbers, "The Pilgrim's Chorus" from "Tannhauser" and "The Viking Song" by Coleridge-Taylor, was presented by the male chorus followed by a cantata, "The Village Blacksmith" from the pen of the American composer, Samuel Gains. This cantata with its rich harmony and delightful melodies accompanying the immortal words of Henry W. Longfellow's poem, made a magnificent ending to a most pretentious program.

The solo parts were sung by Mrs. Katherine Farrell, Mr. Balmer, Miss Eleanor McDonnell and Mr. Siefert. Mrs. Farrell possesses a voice of intense richness, and resonance and depth characterize Mr. Balmer's singing. Miss McDonnell has a voice of strength and loveliness. Mr. Siefert combines clarity and assurance with a voice of unusual beauty. The soloists were well chosen and performed admirably.

The music club wishes to thank every individual, and various civic clubs who contributed in any way to the success of the concert. Due to a most generous offering a May Festival for next year is assured.—M. I. S.

SCOUT TRAINING CLASS IN SESSION

Proper development of boys in troops and Boy Scouts' influence over other boys were discussed when the Boy Scout Leaders' training class held its eighth indoor session at the Scout room, W. Main St., Monday evening. The meeting opened with the usual Scout exercises.

How to renew the interest in Scouting which decreases from time to time was discussed and H. Portz, Springfield, demonstrated the Indian sign language and meaning of each character. A report of the trip to Camp Miami Saturday was given. Members of the class who attended the camp were Glenn Johnson, H. O. Portz, P. L. Walsh, A. E. Chaney and Edward Cornwell.

Members who attended Monday evening's class were Ernest and Pearl Blackburn, P. L. Walsh, Glenn Johnson, A. E. Chaney, Dr. J. A. Yoder, William Rickles, Edward Cornwell and L. H. Barnes.

COW KILLS TWO HORSES

ST. THOMAS, Ont.—Thomas House's old cow had an attack of spring fever, or something. She kicked up her heels in front, kicked up her heels behind, and attacked a team of horses. Both were gored to death before the owner could interfere.

MORE CO-EDS WANTED

DETROIT—Students at the University of Detroit want more co-eds in classes, or none at all, according to Varsity News the weekly students' publication. The university now has an enrollment of 3,620 of whom but seventy-seven are women.

Protect yourself from constipation by eating a delicious cereal. Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. In addition, ALL-BRAN furnishes blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. How much safer than pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases, with a glass of milk—will correct most types of constipation. If your trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, or use in cooking. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

SEEKS TRACES OF PAGETT FAMILY

W. C. CHANCELLOR, Casper, Wyoming, is seeking information regarding the descendants of Meade Randolph Pagett, who was a resident of Xenia in 1892 when he was then about 90 years of age.

Pagett had two sons, Edmond and Charles and two daughters, Mary who married a Mr. Fowler and is supposed to have moved to Canada and Fannie who married a man named Anderson. The inquirer hopes to communicate with descendants of the family in an effort to trace valuable papers. His address is Apartment C, 611 Lind Ave., Casper, Wyo.

test if elected. During the campaign, however, he falls in love with another girl and his political speeches consist of proposals to her.

He marries the second girl, snubbing the beauty contest winner, and trouble develops. Twins come to the White House and more trouble develops.

No award was made this year for the best newspaper editorial, and the award for the best example of a reporters work during the year has been deferred.

Mrs. Buck's novel received almost unanimous acclaim from literary critics when it was published last year and even now continues to hold its place on the best-seller lists, more than a year since publication.

It is the poignant, picturesque story of a Chinese family, and of the sacrifice made by the parents for their children. Mrs. Buck has completed a sequel to it, which will be issued this year.

ST. LOUIS, May 3—Capital and labor must have a "new deal" if we are to emerge permanently from the present depressed economic state, Charles G. Ross, Washington correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said in his article entitled "The Country's Plight—What Can Be Done About It," published Nov. 29, 1931.

"The condition prevailing in this country today may be accurately stated as the maldistribution of wealth, the primary cause of which is the disproportion between the wages and capital and the wages of labor," Ross wrote.

"The hours and compensation of labor must be readjusted to bring about and maintain a balance between production and consumption. This can be done at the expense of dividends, by a more equal distribution of capital and labor," he said.

The problem of restoring the balance between production and purchasing power is primarily the problem of industry itself—not of government," Ross said. "Our government cannot be entirely absolved of responsibility, but the main responsibility lies with industry if the disease at the root of the tree is to be cured."

COAL THIEF FINED

Pleading guilty to petit larceny, in connection with the theft of a ton of coal from the Pennsylvania Railroad, Clarence Berry, 27, colored, 1143 E. Main St., was fined $25 and costs and sent to jail for ten days by Judge E. Dawson Smith in Municipal Court Monday. Railroad Detective Fred O. Leurgance made the arrest early Sunday morning.

UNION SERVICE ON SUNDAY OPEN BOYS' WEEK CELEBRATION

Boys' Week was formally opened in Xenia Sunday evening when the Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, spoke on "The Responsibilities of Adults to the Youth" at union services at that church.

Many boys attended the service and for their benefit the Rev. Mr. Tilford gave an object sermon. He had an ingenious arrangement showing how the admixture of "work," "friends," "duty," "church," "service," "the Bible" and "Christ" would bring "joy" into the heart and life of every boy and adult. Mechanical aids were used in the object sermon.

In his main address the Rev. Mr. Tilford suggested patience to all climbing "Poo's Hill" or the adolescent or "stress and storm" period. He also emphasized the responsibility of adults for the conduct of youth and commended those who build character in youth.

WOMAN WILL SUPPLY XENIA CHURCH; NEW PASTOR APPOINTED

Rev. Mrs. Deella Newlin, formerly of Grant, Neb., has been engaged as supply pastor of the Friends Church, Chestnut and High Sts., it was announced Tuesday. Mrs. Newlin will serve the local church until fall.

The local church has been without a pastor since October 1 when Rev. Russell Burkett accepted the pastorate of the Friends Church, at Fountain City, Ind. Mrs. Newlin has preached at the church here several times and began her active work here Sunday. Mrs. Newlin and her daughter moved into the parsonage on Chestnut St. Tuesday.

The church has extended a call to the Rev. Charles Haworth, Portsmouth, Va., to assume the pastorate here in the fall. Rev. Haworth conducted evangelistic services in Xenia several years ago.

THREE FISHERMEN GIVEN FINES HERE

Charged with fishing with rod and reel in the Little Miami River over the week-end without fishermen's licenses, two Springfield men and a third from Dayton were each assessed fines of $25 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Monday.

Those who pleaded guilty and drew fines were: Donald Elliott and Charles E. Baust, Springfield, and William Kroger, Dayton. A similar charge lodged against another Springfield man was dismissed, following a hearing.

The arrests were made by E. D. Stroup, Xenia, Greene County game warden, and Clyde Rudduck, deputy warden.

TRIAL IS STARTED

Trial of a $500 damage suit, filed by William R. Watt, near Cedarville, against Mrs. Samuel Goldberg, 3949 Rose Bud Ave., Cincinnati, was begun before the May petit jury convened in Common Pleas Court Tuesday morning. The action recalls an auto accident April 30, 1931 in which the plaintiffs auto was allegedly forced off the road near Cedarville, upset in a ditch and wrecked.

TALKIES NOT POPULAR WITH DEAF MUTE HIKER; WILL VISIT GOVERNOR WHITE

Talking motion pictures may be an enjoyment to most persons but they are just a pain in the neck to Ralph K. Bradford, 32, of Indianapolis, Ind., who ankled into Xenia Monday while out for a stroll.

Bradford has been on this stroll since 1923, getting his daily constitutional by walking more than 36,000 miles in the last nine years, while he visited each of the forty-eight states in this country and ten foreign nations.

To make it all the more difficult, Ralph is a deaf mute, which explains why the talkies have no appeal for him. "Since the talkies have been out, I have not been to a picture show in three years," he says, "meaning that he wrote this on the little pad that offers means of communication with the people he meets on his travels. 'Just a few times I'm admitted free to a show, but some say I have 'eyes' to see the pictures, anyway,' he writes."

Illness left Ralph deaf and dumb when he was three years of age and he attended the Indiana State Deaf School until 1923, when he took up globe trotting for his health. He came to Xenia Monday from Springfield, obtained welcoming letters to Xenia and Greene County from City Manager M. C. Smith and Sheriff John Baughn and will leave Wednesday for Columbus where he hopes to meet Governor George White and extend greetings from Governor

Ralph K. Bradford

Horton of Tennessee, whom he visited recently.

Two huge scrapbooks, containing newspaper stories and pictures, letters of introduction and foreign postage stamps, give proof of his travels. Ralph is proud of the fact that he was featured as "The Lonely Hiker" in Robert L. Ripley's famous cartoon "Believe It or Not," March 5, 1930.

He expects to meet Ripley in New York this summer and will get a movie contract to appear in Ripley's projected "Believe It or Not" movie films.

CLARENCE BROWN BOOSTERS IN XENIA FOR POLITICAL RALLY

Pre-primary electioneering on behalf of the gubernatorial candidacy of Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, Republican, Blanchester, was launched officially here in the form of an abbreviated political rally at the west entrance to the Court House Tuesday morning.

Initiating a two-day tour through fifteen counties in this part of Ohio, a motorcade composed of Blanchester, Wilmington and Clinton County residents, boosters of the state secretary in his campaign to win the nomination, arrived in Xenia at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday.

Nearly twenty-five automobile loads of Brown boosters composed the cavalcade, but Brown himself did not accompany the delegation.

Heralded fifteen minutes previously by a band concert, the caravan, auto horns blowing, arrived on schedule, after which twenty minutes were devoted to speechmaking before a crowd of several hundred people assembled at the Court House entrance.

Speakers in the party were John Doyle, Cincinnati attorney, native of Blanchester, and Attorney George Schilling, Blanchester, candidate for prosecuting attorney of Clinton County.

Secretary Brown's mother and his two young daughters, who are accompanying the delegation on its tour, were also introduced to the audience.

Doyle, first speaker on the brief program, described Brown as a "modest, poor man" opposed by two wealthy Republican candidates and reiterated a campaign slogan that the "Republican gubernatorial nomination should not be put on the auction block for the highest bidder." Schilling gave a resume of the public record of the state secretary.

Leaving Xenia at 9:55 o'clock, the motorcade headed toward Yellow Springs, where another stop was made before the trip was resumed with Springfield as the next destination.

YOUTH REMAINS IN GRAVE CONDITION

Everett Jones, 20, Dayton, patient at Espey Hospital, who was critically injured when his motorcycle collided with an auto driven by Edwin Rector, near Xenia, Sunday night at Main and Patton Sts., remained in a "very serious" condition Tuesday according to hospital attaches.

Jones' left leg and foot were so badly crushed that amputation is necessary but his condition has been too serious to permit the operation. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Jones, 2801 Whittier St., Dayton.

SCHOOL BANDS WILL FURNISH MUSIC FOR ROTARY HOBBY FAIR

With the addition of the Bellbrook School Band to the musical organizations to play at the Rotary Club's Hobby Fair here Friday and Saturday an interesting musical program is completed.

According to plans of Dr. A. B. Kester, Rotarian in charge of music, the Central High School Orchestra under the direction of Harlow F. Dean, and the high school band, directed by Fred Sautenig, will play Friday afternoon in addition to a forty piece orchestra from Jamestown, Bowersville and Spring Valley schools under direction of Miss Dona Clare Shelley, Jamestown. The O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band, under direction of Prof. H. E. Seall, will furnish musical entertainment Friday night.

A thirty-two piece combined orchestra and band, directed by Harry Smith, from Bath Twp. High School, Osborn, will play Saturday afternoon and evening and the Bellbrook band, with G. T. Bauman as leader, will play Saturday night.

Additional entries were received at Hobby Fair headquarters Monday evening and the room at 23 E. Main St., will be open Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon and evening to receive others. Boys are urged to enter their exhibits as soon as possible.

More Patient Placidity!

HAVE you ever been forced off the road by a driver attempting to cut in ahead of you; or held back for miles by the sloppy driving of a road-hog in a car ahead until your temper boiled over, and you stepped out and took some reckless chances in an effort to get ahead of the offending driver?

If you haven't, you are to be congratulated on your self-control.

Situations are continually arising in congested traffic which can easily arouse the impatience, irritation or anger of a driver, particularly if he's in a hurry to get somewhere.

But you can't afford to get impatient, irritated or angry when driving a car. It is dangerous, even, to be in a hurry. You will do things when you are impatient or irritated which you would never think of doing in a placid frame of mind. You will take chances which are not worth taking. You are likely to do something which you or what is worse—your loved ones may regret for years to come.

Accept delay in patient placidity when you are held up by conditions beyond your control. Plan your schedules so as to allow for a certain amount of delay if you are on a long trip. Stay behind the sloppy road-hog until you reach a place where you can pass him in safety. And if some other driver does recklessly infringe on your rights in such a manner as to endanger your safety, don't try to take the law into your own hands. Just content yourself with the thought that if he continues such tactics he will bring his own punishment on himself.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter.—Isaiah, v, 20.

ENGLAND ON UPTURN

H. Gordon Selfridge, prominent London, England, department store owner, claims that English business is on the upturn and rapidly bringing a return of confidence in that country.

He recently spoke as follows:

"While the big problem of restoring the purchasing power of the people still remains to be solved there are clear indications that England has turned the corner.

"I fall to find among my own friends here, at least, the evidences of pessimism reported to be prevailing in this country. I have talked to American friends who occupy positions of great responsibility and they are all filled with courage and good cheer.

"England's abandonment of the gold standard has had a salutary effect upon internal business conditions and has stimulated industry as well as buying in so far as the people could afford to buy. There has also been an improvement in unemployment.

"Unpleasantness is felt only when we go outside the borders. But I must say that an increase in the cost of merchandise abroad has not been seriously felt yet by Englishmen. Inside the country the big distributors have done their very best to prevent any feeling of increased cost of living and they have been successful in the matter. The present British government's quick determination of policy on the financial situation gave the whole country a feeling of renewed confidence and strength, with the determination to see this thing through.

"One big obstacle to a return to normal conditions in Great Britain is the very high tax burden. The people are bearing this burden willingly and cheerfully.

"The purchasing power of the people is very much diminished because of the high taxation, and as a consequence whatever buying is done is being done economically both regards quality and quantity."

BRUIN IS NEXT

Of all the wild animals, the bear probably stands next in line for domestication. It is already on very friendly terms with the human race; tourists in the Yosemite and other national parks might say altogether too friendly. One characteristic of the bear is its persistency. When a full-grown bruin inaugurates a food drive it brooks no interference.

Such a bear recently made its uninvited appearance in a Brooklyn home. Its intentions clearly were of a nonmilitant nature, but brown bears have not been kicking around the house long enough to give them the status of a marmoset cat and there was a wild rush to cover when it made a polite but efficient entrance and announced that contributions for relief were in order and no questions asked.

And then and there it gave a practical demonstration of "How to Conduct a Food Canvass" that might well be adopted by the Red Cross or other relief organizations as a model. When the bear left the house, encouraged by a squad of police and a bag of cookies, mostly the latter, it had qualified for the degree of D. F. O., doctor of food consumption. Its familiarity with culinary equipment was marvelous. It emptied the ice chest, tipped it up and shook it, undertook to exhaust the local milk supply, and took a chicken dinner so far into its confidence that the family table has worn an empty expression ever since.

These pleasing little traits of bears—Wall Street variety excepted—are surely indicative of an approach to domesticity. Their indifference to the presence of human beings, their general good nature, and the readiness with which they adapt themselves to "civilized" practices indicate that it may not be long before little brown bears are cluttering up the kitchen or displaying their exceptional qualities and pedigreed lineage at annual bear shows.

TRAINING ANNOUNCERS

So far as is known, no college has yet included a course for radio announcers in its curriculum. They teach how to decorate a room, the best way to manage a hotel and how to grow champion squashes, so why not how to speak properly so as to be able to put a light touch to what otherwise might be a more or less sad dissertation on the joys of Bimble's Bath Balm or Jawbreaker Toothpaste?

When a man has to break into a program between the Rachmaninoff Prelude and the Grand March from "Aida" to tell his listeners that next week at this same hour they will be delighted to listen to Betty Blah in Little Talks on Lesser People, he must do it with just the right intonation, so delicately that no one considers there has been a fistful of hamburger flung into the caviar.

And it is not to be said with any disparagement of the vast majority of radio announcers that a college course may be a necessity; but of course only as a garnish—the red cherry atop the college ice. Where the man or woman who, fond of good diction, has not been sent brown to the dictionary to scan a pronunciation that has just come over the air in a rich baritone? To look up some such common words as romance, comparable, details, sacrilegious, vagaries, amenable—which although every one thinks he pronounces correctly but often, to his astonishment, does not.

WORKS BOTH WAYS

Now the Manchester Guardian wonders "whether the reduction in trans-Atlantic fares will set a fashion of European visits to America all comparable with that of American visits to Europe." It adds, "A visit to America beyond New York became as much an object of ambition, as is a visit to Europe. The chances are that we should understand Americans much better. It is true that many millions of Americans cannot understand England, but every shipload that comes over means that a few go back with understanding and sympathy, even if the majority achieve neither."

It would be fine indeed, if more English could overcome their natural dread of being scolded by Indians and decide to venture into the American hinterland beyond New York. We could really show them something beside Chicago and Hollywood. They would find many of us who aren't in the least Babbity, many who do not eat meals from golden plates.

STARS AND STRIPES

Members of the American Bandmasters' Association want Congress to make the late John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" a National march. Such action would be a fitting tribute to the memory of the "March King." But it would merely be a confirmation of the people's (certainly the bandmasters') choice. "Stars and Stripes Forever" is one march that almost any citizen recognizes if he hears the tune. It was composed long enough ago to have association with the participation of the United States in the World War, in which Sousa himself served at the Great Lakes Naval Training School. Its adoption, nationally, would be a graceful gesture.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Marginalia of a Manhattanite:

Sailing parties remain the gayest of metropolitan evenings. Down to the French Line pier the other night to help friends shed winter worries as they settled aboard the magnificent modernistic Isle de France. Watching the orchestral music and top-hatted chum of merry-making and wondering which monocled gentleman might be attempting to repeat the most audacious of all stowaway attempts—when a tall stranger posing as a Russian nobleman actually dined first class and mingled with guests for two days aboard the Isle; until the captain uncovered him as an unbidden hitchhiker. Even seasoned travelers hesitate over the pronunciation of Isle de France—wondering whether to call it France or Prawn; so the shorter "El" has been generally adopted, much to my own relief.

At a tea recently of the exuberant Charlie Wertenbaker, and into a galaxy of slippers and striped afternoon pants. Made me feel so shabby I spent my time plotting the downfall of all natty dressers, with Pare Lorena, the young movie critic for "Judge," he too, had on a blue shirt. I note that even newspaper men are beginning to pay attention to their clothes: clearly a sign of a disintegrating civilization.

MIDDLE NAME?

Several alert readers point out to me that President Grant did have a middle name, namely Simpson. I think they'll discover that he took the initial S (written without a period when he needed it on his application for entrance to West Point—that he never used the Simpson except jokingly to friends or to save explanation. And the portrait of U. S. Grant which hangs in the White House has no dot after the S. Correct?

To see "Grand Hotel" with Kay Brush and party. Had to call various high-monkeymunks during the morning to get tickets, the house being sold out in July. The success of this picture undoubtedly means a revival of the old "all star" system, this time with more justice in the description. I'd like to see Dietrich and Garbo in the same flicker—and I'd like to be on the lot in the course of the filming, to see the fireworks explode.

PLANET'S NEW LIGHT

All the letter-writers who sign their epistles to the editor, "Old Theatergoers, and the like, would be willing to expatiate on the acting and charm of Mrs. Jacques Martin. Her 50 years in the theater were lauded the other day by a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract.

She is my choice for the new sensation in the Marie Dressler school of acting. Less earthy and more subtle than Marie, she yet has the flair for depictions of bucolic types which should carry her a long way. Almost forgotten in the Broadway season, she appeared recently in "Angeline Moves In"—a play which drew fire from the critics and praise for Mrs. Martin.

Scarcely had the production flopped resoundingly than this "grand dame of the footlights" got her bid from the coast. I salute her!

WHISPS

A gaudy post-card from Texas Guinan, playing the Fanchon and Marco circuit, St. Louis. Several confectioners claim invention of the ice cream soda. Ray Perkins, the radio playboy, received an original song, he tells me, with this note: "Here is a song I composed two years ago. One publisher said it was so terrible even Ray Perkins wouldn't sing it. I said it couldn't be that bad. Who wins?"

Walking swiftly, it would require about 35 hours to pace Broadway from one end to the other. Because the other end's in Albany. The Virginia Reel is the current whim of the Park Avenue Prancers, its strains issuing from apartment windows and the dance floors of swanky clubs. "Mr. Zero," well known Greenwich Village philanthropist, believes the unemployed will fare forth in running shorts and little else when warm weather arrives.

BACK TO CHILDHOOD

Half an hour in one of the few silent movies left in town, dizzied the senses and took me back to childhood; the program consisted of six two-reel western melodramas, in which fourteen fatal shootings occurred up to the time I left, including the tragic demise of a horse which fell over a cliff. If you're curious about relics of that bygone "Aldrome" epoch, better drop in at one of the silent giant places soon, because I'm told no more such pictures are being filmed.

CONTRAST

The radio program the other night which offered Paul Robeson, the negro singer, and Jimmy Durante, in close succession, for some strange alchemy of sound's accidents, seemed to accentuate the personality of both voices in high relief. . . . France is working on a new long-wave transmitter to communicate with submerged submarines.

"The Perfect Song," theme number for the Amos 'n' Andy program, has been played more than 4,000 times and was originally written for "The Birth of a Nation"—the movie which raised the race issue in no uncertain way!

A REAL TEST OF MAGIC

HAMILTON FISH SUGGESTED AS IDEAL INVESTIGATOR FOR MOONEY, BILLINGS

WASHINGTON.—Celebrated though he is as a hostile prober of radical activities, if I were Tom Mooney or Warren K. Billings, I would rather have start another investigation into my case than Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York. Communism and its assorted kindred philosophies, according to Congressman Fish, are as dangerous to the human race as pneumonia. Fish, which has a mortality rate of 99 and a fraction per cent. Nevertheless, in the New York's attitude toward individual Communists there is a peculiar fairness, an eccentric tolerance of their ideas and a kind of sympathy for them, as victims of a belief for which he admits he does not hold them personally altogether responsible. Students of politico-sociology frequently attribute the development of red tendencies in the masses, quite largely to injustices by reactionary folk in positions of authority. Congressman Fish, a scion of one of America's richest families, emphatically indorses this view. Capitalistic greed and oppression, wherever he sees them, have no severer critics than Hamilton Fish, Jr. Not only is he a man of the most excellent impulses; he fully realizes that abuse of power breeds popular hatred of the established order. In fact, it generates Communism, in his opinion. Once generated, his observation leads him to the conclusion that it is highly contagious. Thus it will be seen that the New York representative looks on a Communist, not as an animal which has voluntarily gone mad, but as a creature which has been driven mad, or perhaps has acquired the disease of being bitten. He does not think that such unfortunate should be allowed to run at large, but neither does he think they should be persecuted. He favors quarantining them. I once discussed this plan with him in detail. He specifically advocated providing them with sufficient supplies to give them a good start and manning them on an island (a fertile island, with a salubrious climate) to work out their own destinies. I can conceive of him as acquiescing in the necessity of prison restraint of reds of the more advanced type until an island is available, but assuredly he would be far above any subterfuge in the matter. If at all, I am certain he would imprison them as reds; not on trumped-up criminal charges of some other character.

In asking Representative Fish to comment on Governor Rolph's denial of pardons to Mooney and Billings, I was careful to explain that what I sought was a genuinely unbiased congressional expression of opinion. It was true, too, in a way. One knows in advance that nearly all ultra-conservatives on Capitol Hill will declare the penitentiary to be the proper place for the California captives, as agitators, whether or not they committed the crime for which they were sentenced; that all progressives will say it is an outrage to keep them there. "Both these groups," quoth the New Yorker promptly, "speak from pure prejudice." Both of them! He did not expect the ultra-conservative group. The congressman professed inability, indeed, to take a position concerning Governor Rolph's pardon refusal. "When I was on the Pacific coast several months ago," he related, "investigating Communism's spread, the radical element, recognizing me as a liberal" (and so he is, in his extraordinary fashion) "urged me to go into the Mooney-Billings question, but on its surface it appeared to me an ordinary criminal case, unconnected with the subject of my inquiry. Not having read the record, I am not entitled to an opinion on it." But the "radical element" in my judgment, made no mistake. If Congressman Fish could be persuaded to "read the record," and it convinced him that Mooney and Billings were wrongfully convicted of murder, I am positive he would say so. He might likewise recommended holding them anyway pending accommodations for them on an island—but as radicals; not murderers, unless he so considered them.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Fruit Cocktail
Spanish Merguez
Combination Salad
Hot Buttered Rolls
Olive
Strawberry Jam
Date Sticks Orange Ice
Coffee
This is a luncheon menu serving four. Fresh strawberry shortcake may take the place of the dessert, if one prefers, as it is more timely, although strawberries at this time of the year are expensive and some think not as good flavor as the later ones.

Today's Recipes
Spanish Merguez—Brown one and one-half pounds of pork or veal cut in inch squares in butter with one medium-sized onion. Turn one large can of tomatoes over the meat. Drop into this, noodles made from one egg, and cut in inch squares and boiled in salt water; cook on top of the stove for ten minutes, then put in the oven with two medium-sized green peppers sliced over the top. Sprinkle grated cheese over all, and bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Marshmallow Jelly
Soak one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water, then dissolve in the juice from one No. 2 can red pitted cherries, heated to boiling. Add six tablespoons sugar and three tablespoons orange juice. Pour a little of this mixture in the bottom of a wet mold, arrange four marshmallows cut in pieces in it and set away to harden. Add cherries to the rest of the liquid and when the first layer is hard, pour this on top. Put four marshmallows cut in pieces on top. Let harden in the refrigerator. Cut in squares and serve. Recipe serves eight.

Poems That Live

DO YOU FEAR THE WIND?
Do you fear the force of the wind?
The slash of the rain?
Go face them and fight them,
Be brave again.
Go hungry and cold like the wolf.
Go wade like the crane:
Go palms of your hands will thicken,
The skin of your cheek will tan.
You'll grow ragged and weary and swarthy,
But you'll walk like a man!

Discovered Water Would Reduce

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The mineral water cure for weight reduction was very popular a few years ago. It seems to have been discovered by a bartender. This gentleman was a frequently asked, according to an old custom which was well known in saloon days, by patrons to have a drink with them. Wishing to be polite and not wishing to absorb alcohol quite so regularly, he would take a glass of bottled water. He alternated two different kinds of water, a glass of one and then a glass of the other.

He found that without dieting or exercising he lost weight from 240 pounds to 190, and ascribed it solely to the use of the water. A reputable drug firm, following this lead, put up tablets to make artificial mineral water and sold it for years as a reduction cure. It has not been brought to my attention for some time. But at least it is harmless if anyone wants to try it, and if it works, an easy way to accomplish reduction. It is possible that many of the reduction cures at watering places are due to this principle.

NOTES AND QUERIES
The Effects of Noise on the Nervous System — "Noise has an effect upon the brain. Morphine and nitro-glycerin are known to raise the blood pressure in the brain more than any other drugs; yet experiment has proved that the bursting of a paper bag raised the blood pressure more than either of these drugs, and four times the normal, for seven seconds, and that it did not return for 30 seconds; in addition, there were increased pulse rate and irregular action of the heart."—Dr. Charles Warren.

Mrs. L. W. B.: "I have a break-in gout on my leg which the doctor calls shingles. I thought shingles only came on the chest. Is it liable to come back? What can I do to prevent it?"
Answer: Shingles can appear on any part of the body from the head to the feet. One attack confers immunity—that is, the disease does not occur in the same person more than once.

Stinginess Ruins Happiness

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Would a widower, eight years older than a girl, who seldom takes her out or tries to please her, make her a good husband? asks M. S. He promised to take her to a show, but when she asked him about it he said the tickets were all sold, so he couldn't get any. He wants her to consider herself engaged to him, but he can't buy her a ring because he hasn't enough money.

Of course, M. S., it is possible that your friend hasn't the money either to take you to the show or to buy the ring. Do you know anything concerning his financial standing? It would be better if he told you he couldn't afford to take you to the theater, but he may be sensitive about that. If a girl virtually is engaged to a man she should care enough about him to overlook the fact that he hasn't much money. But if he has it and is simply stingy, she should decide that he isn't the one for her. I think the most miserable wives on earth are the ones with pinch-penny husbands. They are humiliated a hundred times a day. They never can spend a cent more than is absolutely necessary without feeling they would rather be hung than confess and take the scolding. They never have a cent for themselves, no matter how hard they work, and they know they are pitied by all their women friends.

And a man who is inconsiderate of the girl to whom he is engaged, when he is supposed to be doing everything he can think of to win and hold her love, is not likely to make a very thoughtful husband. So if you know your friend has money and won't spend a little now and then to give you pleasure, better call the engagement or understanding, or whatever you call it, off.

A Very Undecided Blond: I think that hard as you have to work at your aunt's home, you will be better off there than married to this boy friend of yours. How can you trust him after his proposal? And why marry a boy of 22? He's not of age and could not marry anywhere without his parents' consent.

Vinegar thinks the proper way to squelch disagreeable persons is to remind them constantly of their faults. That gets under their skin, she says. "Step on their corns freely and frequently," she states. "If you do it is astonishing how quickly they will leave you alone and avoid you at every turn. This, of course, is a great relief, even though the person continues to live near you."

"It is not pleasant to 'nag,' I confess, especially when one loves agreeableness, but it is one way of disposing of the disagreeable type of person. It gets his goat—and works!"
"Perhaps you say this is not in accordance with the Golden Rule, but if you ever develop the disagreeableness that some people have, don't you hope that somebody comes along and straightens you out? I'm sure I would, and I wouldn't care who they were and how they did it."

Yes, I hope I ever get disagreeable to live with—I mean all the time. Goodness knows I'm disagreeable enough on occasion. Someone will straighten me out somehow, and it does seem as if that is the way to manage some people—to give them as good as they give you. Weak people are always bullied. But often talking back only results in constant quarreling, and that is the most nerve racking of all.

Betty: No sensible person ever pays any attention to such petty gossip. Betty. Do what you know is right, and pay no heed to what you hear is said about you.

Tresses Require Care

By GLADYS GLAD

"Boy, am I the happy damsel?" writes Betty F. gleefully. "For the first time in all of my 22 years, I've finally got myself a permanent wave that really is an asset."

It's been my own fault in the past. I never gave the state of my hair much thought. But this time I took your advice and administered the reconditioning treatment described in your "Beauty Culture" booklet first. And not only is my new wave the loveliest all around. What I'm wondering now, though, is whether there's any sort of after-care of a permanent that is necessary. Because if there is, . . ."

Of course, Betty. If there is, you want to know the why and wherefore of it. And so you shall. For if a permanent wave is to be absolutely perfect, the hair must be given as much care after said wave is administered as it was before.

In the first place, the permanent waving process is somewhat drying to almost every head of hair. And therefore, the hot oil treatments advised in my book are just as important after the permanent wave as they were before. For they help no end to counteract any drying effects of the permanent.

waving process. What's more, the oil nourishes the scalp and penetrates into the hair structure, strengthening the hair and preventing dry and split ends.

In addition, permanently-waved hair should be shampooed on an average of once every two weeks, or once a week if the hair is inclined to excessive oiliness. Excessively oily hair collects dirt and dust and has a tendency to flatten a wave. A bland soap and soft, warm water should be used for the shampooing. After the shampoo, the excess moisture should be removed from the hair with a lintless towel. Then a good waving lotion should be applied, and the wave set with the fingers. The hair should always be permitted to dry thoroughly before the waves are combed out. However, permanently-waved hair should never be dried with a dryer that delivers a harsh, hot blast of air. This tends to create a sensitive scalp and causes the hair to lose its gloss and lustre, and to take on a dull, lifeless, dried out appearance.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Fallacy

Marie: I have never heard of a case in which a solution of glycerine and rosewater has caused the growth of hair on the face. This is more or less of a groundless superstition.

Powder Base

Rita: Sponge your face with a good astringent before applying your powder. This forms an excellent powder base for an oily skin.

DOWNEY YIELDS BUT THREE HITS; MATES POUND OUT 9-0 WIN

Losers Subdued At All Times In Loop Contest

The Downtown Country Club softball team's board of strategy went into an old-fashioned huddle Tuesday, seeking to arrive at a plausible explanation and also perfect an iron-clad alibi for certain unhappy events that transpired the previous evening before a large number of unsympathetic onlookers at Cox Field.

It seemed that the Xenia Chick Hatchery team had applied a thick coat of whitewash to the Downtowners, blanketing them, 9 to 0, in a National League contest to take undisputed leadership of the league.

Failing in their quest for the much needed alibi, the board of strategy members took no longer than a split second to discover a dozen or so explanations for the lop-sided drubbing.

For instance there was the masterful pitching of Lloyd Downey for the Hatchery, the timely hitting and almost flawless fielding of this same team, not to mention the ineffective pitching, loose fielding and lightweight hitting of the Downtowners.

The most important of these factors, however, it was agreed, was the expert hurling of Downey, whose only mission in life appears to be in silencing the bats of this Downtown team.

Downey permitted little or no familiarity with his output and at all times had his opponents eating out of his hand. Walking only one batter, he allowed a paltry three hits, an infield hit that Wilson beat out in the fourth inning, and two other ordinary hits that were stretched into doubles by Parrett in the fifth and Wilson in the seventh.

While Lloyd was putting the Downtowners on the spot and giving them the "works," his teammates were not idle at bat. They grouped four successive hits by Reeves, Ernst, Blackburn and Briley to drive in a quartet of tallies in the second inning. In the seventh the Hatchery clubbers added another on Briley's double and Weaver's single, and in the ninth they completed the rout by counting four more runs on a walk, double by Weaver, single by Jenkins and a few errors.

On the mound for the losing team was Frame, who would have had a no-hit game to his credit had it not been for an even dozen solid blows accumulated by the Hatchery team, which was hitting them on the ball diamond a week or so ago and became a star patient at a Cincinnati hospital.

It was reported that he was removed to his home last week, but will be required to navigate around on crutches until the fracture mends.

A little thing like a bone fracture in the arm does not handicap Franklin Stabner, member of the Cadet Rifle Club of the O. S. and S. O. Home. Stabner broke a bone in his left arm a few days ago. He accompanied the cadet team to Dayton for a triangular match with Stivers and Roosevelt last Thursday night, and though he had a splint on the arm, he claimed this would not interfere with his shooting. The youth proved it by recording a score of 192 out of a possible 200 points which, by the way, was three points better than the highest shooter on either the Stivers or Roosevelt teams.

Each getting two hits, Reeves, Briley and Weaver shared batting honors for the winners. Briley hit a double and single and walked once, Weaver collected a two-bagger and single, and Reeves drew a walk and hit a pair of one-baggers.

The O. S. and S. O. Home Cadets and Company L's team square off in an American League contest Tuesday night. Lineups:

PUBLIC SCHOOL PUPILS STAGE MAY DAY TRACK MEET MONDAY

An elaborate program of athletic events for boys and girls, pupils of the grades and junior and senior high schools, marked annual "May Day" exercises for children in the Xenia public schools, staged Monday afternoon at Cox Athletic Field.

Track and field meets for the grades were held separately from the junior and senior high programs, and it was estimated that more than 1,500 school children took part in the ceremonies.

A softball contest in which Central High School defeated Bath Twp. High of Osborn, 6 to 1, was a feature of the afternoon's activities.

Winners in the junior and senior high division of the field day meet follow:

50-yard dash (junior high)—Malavazos, first; McCartney, second; Sanders, third.

Three-legged race—Swadner and Bootes, first; Faulkerson and Wolfe, second; Adair and Hook, third.

50-yard dash (senior high)—Short, first; Wolfe, second; Weaver, third.

50-yard dash (senior high girls)—Funderburg, first; Bobbitt, second; Guyton, third.

50-yard dash (junior high girls)—Turner, first; J. Funderburg, second; Maxwell, third.

High jump (senior high)—Jenkins, first; Francis Dalton, second; Swadner, third.

Shot put (senior high)—Fred Dalton, first; Francis Dalton, second; Hall, third.

Baseball throw (senior high girls)—Jane Fudge, first; Butts, second; Wey, third.

Shot put (junior high)—Kinsey and Rush, tied for first; Malavazos, second.

Broad jump (senior high)—Thompson and Hall, tied for first; Gabbert, second; Wagner, third.

The Story of an Unemployed Girl

CHAPTER 57

IT WAS AFTERNOON when Lillian reached the quaint little town of Salem. The streets were bright and cheerful with the sparkle of early spring sunshine. But the cheerfulness of the day and place had no effect on the ache within her.

She walked down the street, looking neither to the right or to the left until she reached the outer gate of her lawn. The sight of the great white house, with its shuttered security, its smug old doors, its massive brick chimneys only weighed her sunken spirits to their lowest ebb.

There was no fear of her family not receiving her. Their pride would be hurt, but they would not turn her out. It had been her pride which had held her there in New York, put her through those unforgettable tortures of poverty.

There would be no more worry of food, of shelter, of a warm, comfortable bed for her. She would be Lillian Abbott again. As her worn pumps became more worn trudging along the main highway through the spacious lawn to the house, Lillian stopped sympathizing with herself. For Lillian Abbott had left this luxurious home to reach for life in the world outside.

"Lillian Abbott never needed sympathy," she thought. "But Lillian Abbott did. . . Lillian Abbott lived. . . she learned the heartaches, the problems, the realities of girls who have to work for their living."

"Lillian Abbott said she would forget about Lillian Abbott. But she failed even to do that. Lillian Abbott was poor, seeking help of those who had. . . Lillian Abbott was one of those who had. . . having, she did not understand what it meant not to have. . . But Lillian Abbott understood. . ."

But what about those thousands of girls trudging around in thin coats, cheap frocks, hungry, tired and thread-bare gloves. . . just as Lillian Abbott had done?

What was to become of those who sought?

"There are two classes," Lillian realized, "those who have—and those who haven't. I have been of each class. But now I am of the class which has."

There would be no more problems to be solved for herself—but she could shoulder the problems of those thousands of Lillian Abbotts.

Lillian slowed her walk and looked about her. Things began to assume a more pleasant aspect. They imparted a sense to her, that she had been away for years and returning found things unchanged. The great white door, with its massive brass knocker and knob, would swing open for her in only a few minutes. What would she tell the servants, her family? Could she say she had returned because she had failed. . . failed! She would have to offer some story. . . some plausible story!

"I went to get a job. . . jobs are scarce. . . unable to look any longer. . . no many flops. . . so I've come back home. . ."

"No! No! I can't say that. I can't. I won't!" her eyes glowed and her steps quickened as she neared the steps leading to the door.

With the problem of where and how to eat out of her way Lillian would be able to think of the job.

less counterparts of Lillian Abbott. She began thinking of herself as a modern Joan of Arc. . . leading the vast army of unemployed girls. . . cheering them. . . lending them aid. . . giving them food. . . shelter. . . finding them jobs. Lillian Abbott, heiress to the Abbott millions, could do all of these things. . .

The knocker on the great door sounded to Lillian as though she were firing the first cannon, announcing her attack on the enemy of jobless girls.

The startled servants did not baffle or embarrass her. She greeted them almost as casually as if she had just returned from a day's shopping tour in Boston.

"Mother's day with the Swampscott Historical Society, isn't it?" she asked the old butler, whose eyes swam with tears of joy and whose hands clasped to keep them from trembling with excitement.

Lillian had suddenly remembered that it was the day Mrs. Abbott always drove to Swampscott.

"No—Hiram, don't telephone her. I've come home. I'll be here as a surprise at dinner. No—don't call father. I want to surprise them."

She didn't go up to her rooms until she secured a promise from Hiram that he would not tell of her arrival—not even to the other servants.

Upstairs in her own room, she busied herself with getting into comfortable clothes and getting her thoughts thoroughly clear.

Old Hiram built and lighted a fire in her sitting room and brought in coffee that was hot and steaming and comforting.

There was an hour she sat and stared into the fire, holding a bit of crumpled paper which had been shoved under a certain door the night before. . . reading it again and again, and being unable to keep back a few tears for the girl to whom it had been written. . .

"Dear," it began. Always your Barry? It ended.

"Always," she repeated, thoughtfully looking into the fire, whose embers must have formed a vision of the person who wrote that crumpled letter.

He had felt so sorry for her. . . and that look of disgust, fringed with disappointment. It hoped she would find it was untrue. . . that his mother had been wrong. . .

"Yet he said that nothing mattered. . . nothing could matter. . . but that did. . . when she said that I was hired. . . that she found me at the bread line. . . that changed everything. . . she whispered the stinging words. . . and then repeated. . . was sympathetic, sorry for me. . ."

Not for her—the girl he believed was—a girl who would be so down on her luck she would accept money to amuse a fellow?

Then he was sorry for her—sorry!

"Why couldn't he tell the real from the unreal?" she kept asking herself. "He should have known. . . I would have known. . . at that very minute. . . not later when I had had time to think of it over and feel ashamed of myself."

She had found this little note pushed under her door. . .

"Dear—"

"Please open the door. It will help so to talk, won't it? You tell me and we can plan."

"Don't feel too badly, please."

"There must be a mistake—"

"Always your Barry."

But there hadn't been a mistake! And she wished she could deplore his holding the hope there was. But the image of Barry Carlton was as clear and real in the heart of Lillian Abbott. She wanted him just as much in her independence as she did in her need. Love recognized neither poverty or riches. It was swayed by neither. Lillian, the girl, wanted love—and Barry Carlton to her was love.

Yet—he had held her in his arms and possessed her lips and still he did not know beyond doubt that she was the one girl who would not deceive him, could not, because she loved him. Yet—his knowledge that she had been hired had changed his feeling for her. . .

"It even changed the expression in his eyes," she reminded herself—and threw the crumpled note into the crackling fire.

She had thrown off the part of Lillian Abbott, but she could not throw away the memory of the man she loved.

She forced herself to think of the plan which was forming in her mind for the unemployed girls. She could help them to be happier. . . and she resolved that all of her powers of persuasion would be called forth to enlist the wealth of her family toward this end. . .

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK STARS IN ACCIDENT

Five members of the Dayton Roosevelt High School track squad, including Amos Oliver, national scholastic hurdles champion, escaped injury, but were prevented from competing in the Ohio Wesleyan relays at Delaware, O., Saturday, when their auto skidded on the wet pavement of the Dayton Pike, near Xenia, and turned over on one side.

Though the occupants were unhurt, the auto was damaged to such an extent it could not be driven on to Delaware for the meet.

Oliver, counted on as the school's mainstay in two relay events; Xavier Fitten, also a member of two relay teams; Hawkins, entered in two weight events, and two other West Side cinder stars were in the car when it half upset.

JAILED FOR ATTACK ON SISTER-IN-LAW

Accused of assaulting his sister-in-law, Alonzo Jeffries, 30, Cedarville, was fined $10 and costs by Mayor A. E. Richards at Cedarville, Monday afternoon. The assessment was equivalent to fifteen days in the county jail since Jeffries was unable to pay the fine and costs.

Jeffries was apprehended by Xenia police at 9 a. m. Monday, in response to a call from H. A. McLean, marshal of Cedarville. He was found walking along the Pennsylvania Railroad right-of-way in this city and was turned over to the marshal's custody.

STARS OF RADIOLAND

Peggy Davis, a comely blonde, likes radio dramatics. She recently had an important role in "Dust of the Road," a new play, and one of a weekly matinee series presented over a leading network.

Original "Alice" To Broadcast Wednesday

By MILDRED MASON

The most famous Alice in the world, the original "Alice in Wonderland," will go on the air Wednesday afternoon at 3:05 o'clock over an NBC network through WLW, Cincinnati. The famous Alice who is now Mrs. Alice Liddell Hargreaves, was only a little girl when Lewis Carroll wrote her into his story which is one of the best known among children.

The program is in honor of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Carroll and Mrs. Hargreaves is coming all the way from London to participate in the program. The program is presented by the students and faculty of Columbia University and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia, will introduce Mrs. Hargreaves.

Ripley Returns to the Air.

Robert L. "Believe-it-or-not" Ripley will begin a new series of broadcasts over an NBC-WJZ network Wednesday at 6:15 p. m. He has just returned from an extensive trip through the South Seas and the Orient and he will relate many curious facts gathered on his trip in his talks.

Helen Morgan Is Guest.

Helen Morgan celebrated night club and theater singer of "torch songs," will be heard in a program over an NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati, Wednesday at 8 p. m. She will sing "The Man I Love," by George Gershwin, as well as several selections from her musical comedy success, "Sweet Adeline."

Dramatize O. Henry Stories.

A series of dramatizations of O. Henry's popular stories will be inaugurated over an NBC network through WLW, Cincinnati, Wednesday at 8 p. m. "Mammon and Archer" will be the first story to be dramatized. The new feature will take the place of the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," which will now be heard every Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

To Discuss Derby.

Irvin Cobb and Grantland Rice, who have discussed two Kentucky derbies for radio listeners, will come together for a third time on the eve of the famous racing event, during a program over an NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati, Wednesday at 9 p. m. Cobb will also describe scenes at some of the Derby races. James Melton, tenor of the Revelers quartet, will sing on the same program.

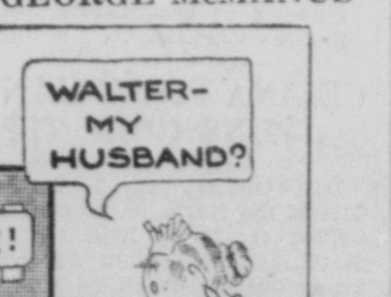

EXTEND TIME FOR ASKING CROP LOANS

The time limit for filing United States crop production loan applications has been extended until May 14, according to a communication received by County Agent E. A. Drake from the Washington office. The time limit had originally been set for April 30, but due to the demand an extension was granted.

To date loans totaling more than $17,000 have been applied for in this county and checks are being mailed from Washington to the farmers.

The money is to be used for crop production purposes such as purchase of seeds, fertilizers, spray materials, feeds for work stock, fuel and oil for tractors and repairs and miscellaneous supplies.

THE ART OF CUTTING FLOWERS

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Garden Expert for Central Press and The Gazette

"If you're going to have a thriving garden this summer you'll have plenty of flowers to cut for use in the house," I said, "but do you or your wife know how to cut flowers?"

There's a knack to cutting flowers with least injury to the plants and for longest life of the blossoms.

Do not break or pull flowers, but cut them off with a sharp knife or sharp shears.

Flowers are best cut either early in the morning or late in the afternoon when they are full of sap. By observing this simple procedure this summer your garden will flourish at its best and the blooms for room decoration will last surprisingly long.

Place cut flowers in water at once and keep them in a cool place. The water should be changed each day. A few pieces of charcoal in the water and a few drops of formalin will help to keep the water pure. The end of the flower stems should also be cut off daily with a slanting cut.

Free Gardening Advice

Since grass often will not grow well under trees, it is often wiser to use some other kind of a ground cover for such spots. For names of useful ground covers, other than grass, write to the Good Gardening Department, The Gazette, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, for a FREE personal reply.

Cooper Makes Peace-Overwork Will Cease

Gary Cooper, back in Hollywood after his big-game hunting expedition, walked into the office of B. P. Schulberg with the sang froid of a man who had recently shot two lions and sidestepped a charging rhinoceros.

When he came out a half hour later, Joan Crawford will play hour later there was a grin on his face and he made the round of offices shaking hands with various executives. Thus was dissipated the last remaining doubts of his reconciliation with Paramount.

Gary says the studio has promised to use more care in choosing his stories and has given him to understand he won't have to make as many pictures in the future. The last year before his illness he made eight and one-half films, and now he will not have more than four.

Although he lost five pounds in New York, Cooper is still twenty pounds heavier than when he left Hollywood. He's feeling fine and before he goes to work on "Devil in the Deep," he'll undertake to find a house where he can set up the trophies of his African trip. That is, all except his pet chimpanzee, "Toluca," which is now occupying part of a suite at the Roosevelt Hotel but which will be relegated to the zoo in the near future. Gary has 3,000 feet of film taken on his trip.

Paul Kelly's brief bid for a prat in "Rain" is finished. For one reason or another, United Artists has decided to give the role, that of the marine, to Bill Gargan. Broadway actor now playing a comedy butler in "The Animal Kingdom," Gargan will leave the show to arrive in Hollywood Wednesday. Lewis Milestone expects to start rehearsals about a week

ORGANIZE JUNIOR GARDEN CLUB HERE WITH 146 MEMBERS

Another George Washington chapter of the Junior Garden Clubs of America was formed at East High School recently with Prof. R. A. Braxton and J. L. Smith as general advisors. There are 146 members in the newly-organized chapter, bringing the total enrollment in junior garden clubs in the city to approximately 250 members.

Owners of ground in East High community who have a lot or lots to contribute to the organization for planting purposes are asked to notify Prof. Braxton or Prof. Smith. Plans are being made for a flower and vegetable show by the junior clubs in the fall and ploughmen have been engaged by the Xenia Garden Commission to start work this week on the George Little plot N. West St. for McKinley School children and on the Otto Hornick lot in the Dodds addition for Central High School students. Lots are being looked after for Spring Hill school children.

The garden commission recently planted trees to each of the schools in the city and these have been planted at each of the respective schools.

The members, officers and advisors of the East High chapter follow: R. A. Braxton and J. L. Smith, advisors; Hannah Thomas, president; Howard Lewis, vice president; Annette Johnson, secretary; Orville Lee, treasurer. Members and patrons:

GRAND JURY INDICTS SEVEN; RECOMMENDS MOVING OF JAIL

An investigation to determine the feasibility of transferring the county jail from E. Market St. to the Court House.

That was the recommendation made by the May grand jury in its report to Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy late Monday afternoon, following a one-day session in which twelve criminal cases were considered, seven indictments were returned, four cases were continued until the next grand jury is convened in October. Seventeen witnesses were examined by the investigating tribunal.

Indictments were returned as follows:

George W. Jackson, alias H. A. Clark, for forgery; Paul Johnson, for auto theft; Ernest L. Runkel and Henry Hopkins, for grand larceny; Howard Eakins alias Noah Eakins, for issuing a fraudulent check; Carl Huff for petit larceny; Trevor Evans for auto theft.

Cases ignored were those of Austin Knisley and William Decker, each accused of petit larceny; For- est K. Waddle, charged with embezzlement, and Frances Wilson, alleged to have obtained money under false pretenses.

The case of William Lauderback charged with issuing a worthless check, was continued until the next grand jury.

W. W. Tronice served as foreman of the grand jury, which made the customary examination of the county jail and reported the unusual recommendation of removing it from the present location and installing it in the Court House.

Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister announced that arraignments of some of the persons indicted by the jury will take place Wednesday and Thursday this week.

DO YOU INHALE?

Why is this vital question so much avoided by other cigarettes?

EVER since Lucky Strike created that special process for purifying fine tobacco and told the full facts about cigarette smoking—the industry has been in an uproar. For Lucky Strike has dared to mention things that were considered "taboo" in the cigarette trade.

You may have noticed a striking avoidance generally of the word "inhale" in cigarette advertising. Why? Goodness only knows! For everybody inhales — knowingly or unknowingly! Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

That's why it's all-important to be certain that your cigarette smoke is pure and clean—to be sure you don't inhale certain impurities.

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question—for it gives you the protection you want... because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies-created that process. Only Luckies have it!
